Challenge

A inspiration guide for your daily drawing practice to expand and strengthen your visual vocabulary.

I am so excited that you're here, getting ready to draw an icon every day this year.

Let's be clear we are not making art. We are expanding our visual vocabulary. We have this HUGE resource inside of ourselves that mostly goes un-tapped.

The process of drawing actually helps us understand what we are hearing or seeing. When we add visual elements to our notes, studies show we retain the information longer, and we can recall it faster. Learning to be visual is just good for your brain.

On the following pages we have listed an icon for every day of the year except October.* These are just suggestions. If something impresses you on a day - draw that thing. Maybe your granddaughter has a panda cupcake for her party, so maybe that day you draw a panda or a cupcake or a panda cupcake. Or if you don't want to draw something on the list, you can skip it and draw something else. The important thing is that you draw daily. Each month has items listed in alphabetical order, but you can draw them in any order you like. You don't even have to stay in the same month.

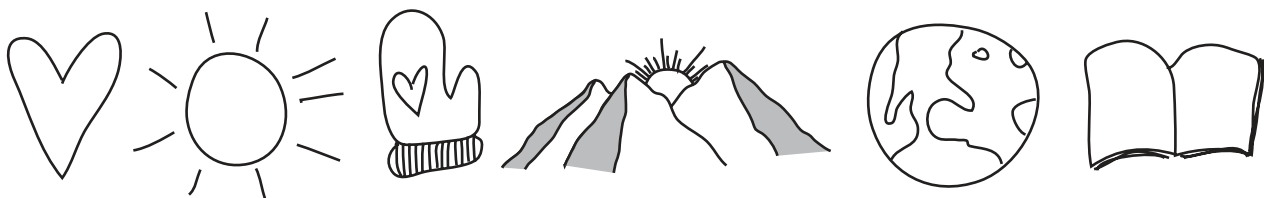

I tried to leave a little room for notes and reflections. So if you can relate to an icon, write a short note about it.

Post your doodles in the Sketchnote Boss Facebook group or on Instagram using the hash tag @sketchnoteboss

If you have questions or suggestions on how we can improve this challenge, shoot me an email at blessinks@live.com

Happy Doodling, Marsha Baker

*In October we will be drawing words from the Inktober list will be published later this year.
